Hug A Tree

Jacey Lorenz Gulmatico

The tree is a pine tree that was planted when we first moved in. Now it has grown to the size of our house. It is surrounded by concrete walls and metal fencing, confined in it's modern cage, but protected from the dangers of the outside.

This tree reminds me that my life will be a fraction of this tree's existence. Nature around us will always find a way to live. All while providing us with shade, oxygen and several other benefits that we don't even see.
